Again, the prices below are not absolute. The GM may adjust the prices of items individually or by list, they may make any item available or not, they may say that magic items can't be sold for gold at all and that the below prices only roughly estimate value when people are trading magic items for other magic items or they may even not show these tables to their PCs at all and just use them to estimate treasure values. The below lists are intended as a tool, not an imposition on your campaign world.

CONSUMABLES

Consumables represent all items that can be used up when used in their intended manner. By default, consumables are somewhere around one tenth the price of an equivalent permanent item. The scroll prices below represent a typical scroll of that level. Scrolls with significant direct value, such as scrolls of fabricate or wish, may be priced differently.

Periapt of wound closure Forgotten Realms Wiki Fandom. The periapt was a brilliant red stone set in gold hands and hung from a chain of gold.. Aug 29, 2011 Re: Periapt of Wound Closure and Vampires Well, Regeneration is an artifact from previous editions that DID have dismemberment, such as receiving hits from a Sword of Sharpness or getting bitten by the Tarrasque (I had a cleric who lost his shield AND his shield arm to that bugger).
